Love is Fear (Valerie Dearborn, #2) by Caroline Hanson

Love is quite literally, both physically and nonphysically, the opposite of the fear/stress response. Our bodies were designed to live in love, not fear. Living in fear, quite frankly, is a malfunction.. Fear triggers your stress response and a fear frequency is sent from your memory banks to the hypothalamus in the brain, which turns the stress switch on. This stress response, or fight or flight mode, is only supposed to happen if our life is in imminent mortal danger.

Paulo Freire, a Brazilian expert on education says: "The opposite of love is not, as we many times or almost always think, hatred, but the fear to love, and fear to love is the fear of being free." Love softens you, fear hardens you. Love opens the universe, fear isolates you in yourself. Why are we afraid to love? "Fear is the most difficult emotion to handle. You cry the pain, you scream the anger, but fear is docked silently in your heart."-David Fischman-Love is always a risk ...

French poet and critic Paul Valéry was born in the small western Mediterranean village of Sète, France in 1871. Critics have called Valéry the last French symbolist, the first post-symbolist, a masterful classical prosodist, and an advocate of logical positivism. Clearly, Valéry was heir to the symbolist tradition of another French poet, Stéphane Mallarmé, whom he knew and venerated, who ...

On the surface, love is a positive emotion that fosters a connection between people, whether they are parents, lovers, friends or family of any kind. Fear, on the other hand, does exactly the opposite. When we fear someone or something, we want to do anything other than connect with the feared person or object.
