We are set free by the power of God's grace and love. Soar like an eagle and enjoy the flight the Lord has given you. Our emotions in response to sufferings may, like Job's, run the gamut; but our abiding faith will glorify God and be remembered by those who watch us overcome. We will always have those emotions of the world.

Notes: This is the final book in the Tales From the Special Branch series; our action starts two weeks after the end of Dare to Think. While it's not entirely crucial for you to have read the rest of the books first, it'll probably make a hell of a lot more sense if you have an inkling of the backstory.

Objectives for deeper understanding. The teens will understand the need for continual conversion and will be able to explain the origins of the Sacrament of Confession. They will also be able to explain why it makes sense for us to actually confess our sins to a priest rather than simply go to our rooms and tell God that we are sorry.
