Used Gamut Di150 Integrated Amplifiers

GamuT's Limited Edition Di150 integrated amplifier is a true dual mono design utilizing separate power transformers with separate secondary windings for the pre and power amplifier circuits. The amplifiers protection circuitry can detect DC errors, high level subsonic signals, long-term ultrasonic signals, high temperatures and low impedance loads.

Although not quite as powerful as the Gamut Di150 LE or the darTZell LHC-208 or CTH-8550, the Boulder 865 ($12,000) delivers a rock solid integrated amplifier. This integrated amp is now about six years old so finding a clean pre-owned one should bring the price down substantially. Dan.

In essence, the Di150 LE combines many of the key elements of our D3i preamp with those of our D200i stereo power amp. Sure, there are slightly less watts in the integrated version, but you can rest assured that we've bent over backwards to retain as much of the earth-moving performance of the two-box combination as possible.

My first meeting with GamuT gear was at a New York Stereophile Show about ten years ago. The company had a run of success with their original CD-1 CD player and their line of solid state amplifiers. Both their amps and CD player met with a wide body of critical approval in the audio press and were sought after by many.

The GamuT CD-3 CD Player — Audiophilia

The DI 150 integrated amp is the first electronic component in the GamuT line to incorporate the new design cues, and it is a major step up from the earlier rather plain appearance of the D200 power amp or the D3 preamp upon which it is based. The look is clean, modern, luxurious and symmetrical.

GamuT Audio System: Taking the system approach and finding ...

I have tried/tested a few of the so called high end integrated amplifiers. The best I have found : Gamut DI150. On the other hand, there is no such a thing " the best " in audio business. All depends on accompanying equipment, room acoustics and first of all, your preferences. I listened to Vitus, Hegel, Ayre, Moodwright and a couple more.

Finally, the internal cabling has been changed to GamuT's Wormhole speaker cable, an unusually thin type for a high power amp maker. GamuT only makes one preamplifier: the D3i. This is described as a dual-mono design and has both balanced and single ended inputs and outputs on its substantial yet not overly weighty carcass.

Gamut, manufacturer of some very fine amplifiers and speakers, has gone downmarket with the Si100. Yes folks, in Gamut world, paying almost four grand for an amplifier is still considered entry-level. Even so, if this integrated offers a decent chunk of the company's traditionally impressive performance, the price won't be an issue.
